Breaking News! VWB Vets to Liberia Team Returns Home, Trip a Great Success

Veterinarians Without Borders' needs assessment trip to Liberia ends with great success. See: The Liberian Observer article & http://moa.gov.lr/press.php?news_id=99.

Hosted by the Agriculture Ministry, the Vets to Liberia Team visited government agencies, universities, private farms and remote villages to gather data and identify immediate needs to address animal healthcare, disease prevention and wildlife protection. While there, the Vets to Liberia Team set up a Rabies Clinic, including visiting neighborhoods to vaccinate pets and inform the public about disease prevention and treatment. Workshops are planned to contain rabies transmission and bacterial and parasitic diseases transmitted from animals to man. With our Vet Team now back in the U.S., VWB is on track to raise awareness and funding to establish veterinary services in-country that will enable Liberia to produce its own food and protect its resources and human health.

VWB is a volunteer network of veterinarians working with communities to improve the well-being of animals, people and our planet. A 501(c)(3) non-profit organization, VWB is currently establishing programs to support Liberia's veterinary re-development project and help rebuild one of Africa's most promising democracies. The VWB Membership Drive is now in progress accepting applications for Charter, Student and other Membership opportunities. For more information, contact us at vwb.usa@gmail.com. Please join us in supporting this exciting organization now in development and expansion by making an online donation at www.vetswithoutbordersus.org. Thank you.
